The psych movie

The beyond-charming cult crime comedy series Psych, starring James Roday Rodriguez and Dulé Hill as a pair of bumbling detectives who convince their clients Rodriguez possesses special psychic powers, has had two made-for-TV movies since the original series run ended in 2014. In 2017, USA aired Psych: The Movie, and in 2020, Peacock aired Psych 2: Lassie Come Home (referring not to the iconic dog but to another detective on the show, Carlton Lassiter, played by Timothy Omundson). And today, Peacock announced the next step in series creator Steve Franks' six-movie plan. Psych 3: This Is Gus is coming to Peacock, with production scheduled to start summer 2021 in Vancouver. Rodriguez, Hill, Omundson, Maggie Lawson, Kirsten Nelson, and Corbin Bernsen will all reprise their roles from the Psych-verse, and Franks will direct and executive produce. The script, like the previous film, comes from Franks and Rodriguez, and other executive producers include Rodriguez, Hill, and returning Psych producer Chris Henze. As fans might guess from the title (beautifully aping This Is Us, a show Omundson has appeared on), this film will focus on Hill's character of Gus, in the middle of a surprise marriage and a new child, tracking down and finding a separate, disgruntled husband alongside Rodriguez's Shawn. Psych 3: This Is Gus does not currently have a release date, but we'll let you know once it does. Check out the official Twitter announcement below, alongside the official synopsis of the film spin-off. In preparation for a shotgun wedding before the birth of Baby Guster, Shawn (James Roday Rodriguez) and Groomzilla Gus (Dulé Hill) go rogue in an attempt to track down Selene’s (Jazmyn Simon) estranged husband, as Lassiter (Timothy Omundson) grapples with the future of his career. The NBCU streaming platform unveiled on Thursday a green light for Psych 3: This Is Gus, with production set to begin this summer in Vancouver. Following Psych 2: Lassie Come Home, the three-quel is named after Dulé Hill’s Burton “Gus” Guster. In preparation for a shotgun wedding before the birth of Baby Guster, Shawn (James Roday Rodriguez) and Groomzilla Gus (Dulé Hill) go rogue in an attempt to track down Selene’s (Jazmyn Simon) estranged husband, as Lassiter (Timothy Omundson) grapples with the future of his career. Also set to reprise their roles from the series and films are Maggie Lawson as Juliet O’Hara, Timothy Omundson as Carlton Lassiter, Kirsten Nelson as Karen Vick and Corbin Bernsen as Henry Spencer. The Psych movie franchise is a continuation of the original series, which aired on USA Network from 2006 to 2014. The first installment, Psych: The Movie, aired on USA on December 7, 2017. It follows Shawn, Gus and Juliet’s new life in San Francisco. The gang reunites after a mystery assailant targets one of their own. The sequel Psych 2: Lassie Come Home, originally produced for USA, premiered on Peacock at launch in Spring 2020. The film focused on Lassiter, who is ambushed on the job and left for dead. In a vintage Psych-style Hitchcockian nod, he begins to see impossible happenings around his recovery clinic. Shawn (James Roday) and Gus (Dulé Hill) return to Lassie’s side in Santa Barbara and are forced to navigate the personal, the professional and possibly the supernatural. Psych 3: This Is Gus hails from UCP, a division of Universal Studio Group, in association with Thruline Entertainment. Series creator Steve Franks will serve as executive producer and director. Chris Henze will executive produce for Thruline. James Roday Rodriguez and Dulé Hill will also executive produce. Franks and Rodriguez will co-write. The film follows the Psych characters three years later in San Francisco, since the series finale in 2014. The movie aired on December 7, 2017 on the USA Network.[1] James Roday, Dulé Hill, Timothy Omundson, Maggie Lawson, Kirsten Nelson, and Corbin Bernsen all reprised their roles from the series, with frequently recurring actors Kurt Fuller and Jimmi Simpson also appearing. The film was directed by series creator Steve Franks, who co-wrote the script with Roday. Franks hopes to make five more sequels,[2] with the sequel, Psych 2: Lassie Come Home, debuting on July 15, 2020 on NBCUniversal's new streaming service, Peacock. Plot As shown in the series finale, Shawn, Gus and Juliet relocated to San Francisco, where they remain three years later. After Juliet's SFPD partner Sam Sloane is shot, Shawn and Gus attempt to find out who was responsible and why it happened. They soon learn that a mysterious organization is threatening the reputation, safety, and well-being of Juliet (who wound up needing to use unconventional and questionable but still-lawful methods to put away perpetrators, as well as the individual who snitched on all of them). At first, Juliet is reluctant to allow anyone to help her out with her problem, but an unpleasant development connected with her partner's shooting convinces her she needs Shawn's help. Meanwhile, Shawn refuses to get married until he can locate his grandmother's engagement ring, which he had taken without permission from his dad's house, and which had in turn been stolen from him while he was in the very act of proposing to Juliet in San Francisco three years earlier. His efforts to retrieve the ring land him in hot water with an individual known as the premiere person fencing stolen goods in the Bay Area, with surprising results. Chief Vick, up for consideration for a position as police commissioner, is not aware that her daughter has fallen in with the wrong crowd. Gus, meanwhile, lands in hot water with his boss as a result of Shawn bringing his business to Gus's workplace, and is soon blown away when he has a run-in with an attractive woman who uses all the best moves in his own playbook. While working around all of these complications, the group encounters old friends, discover surprising pieces of information, and come to some major determinations about their futures. Cast Main article: List of Psych characters James Roday as Shawn Spencer Dulé Hill as Burton "Gus" Guster Timothy Omundson as Carlton "Lassie" Lassiter Maggie Lawson as Juliet "Jules" O'Hara Kirsten Nelson as Chief Karen Vick Corbin Bernsen as Henry Spencer Zachary Levi as Thin White Duke Ralph Macchio as Nick Conforth Jimmi Simpson as Mary Lightly Julianna Guill as Dr. Butterfly McMillan Jazmyn Simon as Selene Robert LaSardo as El Proveedor Kurt Fuller as Woody Strode Charlotte Flair as Heather Rockrear Sam Huntington as Sam Sloane[3] John Cena as Ewan O'Hara[4] Mena Suvari as Allison Cowley Sage Brocklebank as Buzz McNab Nathan Mitchell as Black Gentleman Ninja[5] Production Once production on the dramedy series Psych wrapped, series creator Steve Franks immediately had the idea to bring the Psych universe back in movie form later on. On May 8, 2017, USA Network confirmed that a TV movie would be produced.[6] Franks directed the movie and co-wrote it with series star James Roday. All the series main cast returned for the TV movie, with Zachary Levi portraying the main villain, "Thin White Duke",[7] while Jazmyn Simon – co-star Dulé Hill's real-life fiancée – plays Selene, a romantic interest for Gus.[8] and WWE wrestler Charlotte Flair portraying Heather Rockrear.[9] On June 28, 2017, former guest star Ralph Macchio joined the cast, reprising his role as Nick Conforth,[10] the police academy officer who trained Shawn and Gus in season 5. Principal photography took place from May 25 to June 18[11][12] in Vancouver, British Columbia. In addition, Kurt Fuller and Jimmi Simpson reprised their respective roles of Woody Strode and Mary Lightly.[13] The movie was released on December 7, 2017 on USA Network.[14] Timothy Omundson returned as Carlton "Lassie" Lassiter but suffered a stroke just before shooting was to begin. The movie was partially rewritten, with Omundson appearing in only one scene that was filmed outside the main shoot in Vancouver months later.[15] Reception Ratings The original American broadcast premiere received 1.26 million viewers and was the most watched scripted program of the day. It also achieved a demo of 0.5 in the 18–49 category, matching the demo from multiple Season 8 episodes, while beating the demo scores of many USA Network original shows' episodes in 2017.[16] In the Nielsen Live+7 ratings, the film nabbed a 1.0 rating in adults 18–49 and 2.2 million viewers.[17] Critical reception Entertainment Weekly graded it with a "B+."[18] Danette Chavez of The A.V. Club gave it a "B" saying "Psych: The Movie is lively and lightweight, buoyed by Roday and Hill's bond, which hasn't diminished at all in the last three years. Its structure is classic Psych."[19] The review aggregator website Rotten Tomatoes reported a 100% approval rating based on 14 reviews.[20] Sequel Main article: Psych 2: Lassie Come Home At a Comic Con gathering, Steve Franks stated that he hoped to make five additional TV movies, and was looking to the Fast and Furious franchise for inspiration.[21] Psych: The Movie 2 was greenlit on February 14, 2019, with all the main cast confirmed to return.[22] The film was originally set to premiere later in 2019.[23] On September 17, 2019, it was announced that the sequel had been renamed Psych 2: Lassie Come Home and would instead be airing on NBCUniversal's new streaming service, Peacock. The movie premiered on July 15, 2020, the day the service officially launched.[23][24][25] References ^ "'Psych: The Movie' Is Coming to USA Network December 7th".
